

An unexpected guest joins me for evening dinner !

Author: Mark Phillips
Emergency coordinator
United Nations World Food Programme
Fast IT, Telecommunication & Emergency Support Team (FITTEST)

19 April 2009- CHAD

Just a small note to let you know about tonight's dinner arrangements. After a hard days work at the office inspecting the vehicle fleet it was time to sit down and have dinner / nice cold glass of coke.

"O what to order emmm, maybe a plate of rice and chicken as I had chicken and rice the last few days so it was time for a change?"

Anyway back to the story, as I sat down getting ready to tuck into my dinner, the security guard started running up and down the restaurant screaming and waving his baton (wooden club) around. He was shortly joined by another two members of staff, but instead of batons one was waving a plate and the other a tea towel! This cant be the entertainment was the thoughts going around my head, wonder what's going on here?

Then I found out, as a little monkey decided to come out from hiding and join me at my table for dinner. He actually climbed onto and sat on the chair beside me, with a look of what's all that noise and fuss about, when's dinner ready! I can say though that look did not stay there for long, as when the restaurants staff and the still screaming security guard realised where he was they started the next chase scene. The whole affair reminded me of the key stone cops in the black and white movies chasing a robber. Running up and down but not really getting anywhere! After another 15 minutes of chasing they finally chased the monkey out of the restaurant. It was time to sit back and enjoy the rest of my meal, luckily without any further events!

Note: No animal was hurt or injured in the process of writing this blog.

Cheers

Mark