

WFP Collaboration with Civil Society Partners

2014 Facts & Figures

WFP works with a wide range of civil society organizations at country, regional and global level, and across multiple programmes and operating contexts. In 2014, WFP collaborated with more than 1,100 NGO and International Red Cross and Red Crescent partners who continue to play a crucial role in the delivery of WFP assistance, incl. both food and non-food based programming such as cash and vouchers and capacity development. The below figures provide a snapshot of the overall collaboration in 2014.

Working with civil society partners enables WFP to deliver at speed and scale. It also brings cost saving and efficiencies. Notwithstanding WFP's own extensive field presence, the engagement that especially local NGOs have with local communities and their deep contextual understanding enriches WFP programmes, facilitates increased access and support greater accountability to affected populations. Working in partnership with civil society organizations also strengthens WFP's technical skills and expertise, and supports innovative approaches and programmes.
