

Amir Mahmoud
Abdulla
Deputy Executive Director

World Food Programme Biography

Amir Mahmoud Abdulla became the Deputy Executive Director of the World Food Programme in March 2009.

Mr Abdulla is currently based in Rome and leads the implementation of the new corporate architecture aligning WFP's strategy, programme structure, financial management, and planning, monitoring and reporting to help achieve the Sustainable Development Goals at country level.

In addition to his WFP responsibilities, Mr Abdulla was appointed Vice-Chair of the United Nations Development Group (UNDG) in January 2016.

In 2015 and 2016, Mr Abdulla was based in New York to enhance WFP's engagement with the United Nations system, Member States and key stakeholders. Before moving to New York, he was the Chief Operating Officer (COO), overseeing the WFP Regional Directors and Directors of Emergency and Field Security, and was responsible for leading WFP's extensive field operations.

Mr Abdulla's career at WFP began as a logistics officer in 1991. He then went on to serve in a variety of field and headquarters posts. From 2000 to 2001, he successfully led the implementation of an integrated Enterprise Resource Planning (ERP) solution using SAP software as Project Manager for WFP's corporate information management system.

From 2001 to 2004, Mr Abdulla served as Director of Budget and, in 2004, was named Regional Director for the Middle East, Central Asia and Eastern Europe. Mr Abdulla served in that position until July 2006, when he took up the post of Regional Director for Southern Africa until his return to WFP headquarters in Rome in 2008 to become WFP's Chief Financial Officer (CFO). During his tenure as CFO, he led WFP's successful implementation of IPSAS (International Public Sector Accounting Standards), the first large-scale adoption of IPSAS within the United Nations system.

Prior to joining WFP, he was a Branch Manager in Juba and Port Sudan for the shipping and forwarding company Transintra, and Assistant Area Manager for the engineering company Burmeister & Wain Scandinavian Contractor in the Sudan. Mr Abdulla also taught at the American School and Comboni College in Khartoum.

Mr Abdulla is a graduate of the Imperial College of Science and Technology, London University, where he read Electrical Engineering and graduated in June 1978 with a BSc Honours degree. He is an Associate of The City & Guilds of London Institute.

A national of the Sudan and the United Kingdom, Mr Abdulla was born in Khartoum in 1957. He is married with three grown children and two grandchildren.